

* 128102 American Sign Language 1.1 9–12 Interactive

American Sign Language (ASL) is a visual-spatial language used by the majority of deaf persons in the United States and Canada. ASL is unique among world languages because it allows students to use space and motion to communicate. This course covers beginning exposure and practice in American Sign Language (expressive and receptive). The primary emphasis is on language in context and in real-world situations. Successful completion is based on student submissions and a final performance exam. Korin Riedberger